Blackwell's Island, but he had been so troublesome and was in such a condition that they locked him up.

The urfortunate clergyman appeared in the Police Court this morning in a sadly rumpled state. His clothing was torn and covered with dirt and blood. There was a patch of scalp open on his head, whence the blood came. Policeman Kane said he got that from falling against an Elevated railroad pillar.

Justice Burke made no discrimination against an Elevated railroad pillar.
Justice Burke made no discrimination between the Episcopalian minister and the rest of the culprits before him. He heard the complaint and asked Mr. Wilson what he had to say.
The unfortunate man looked crushed and half alive. He pleaded in a broken voice that he had taken one drink, and that he was not responsible for what followed; also that he was never drunk before

The Justice fined him $10. The prisoner could not pay it. He did not have a friend in court and seemed unable to think of where to send for help. He had a pawn ticket for $8 upon a watch which he said was worth very much more and he tried to sell it to the policemen in the court prison. He failed in that and was returned to his cell, where he lay on a bench and went to sleep. He was asked if there was any one he wanted to com-municate with and he replied that there was no one.

After Mr. Wilson had been in his cell about two hours Justice Burke sent for him. When asked his history he admitted that he was the Episcopal clerkyman of Blackwell's Island, but last
